The 4th of July celebration at Highland Park was a success from every standpoint except the financial. The crowd was large and well behaved. The baseball games which were the chief attractions of the day, were well played and interesting. We haven't space to give a full account of the games, but the following is the result:

First game, West Liberty 7, Frenchburg 5.

Batteries—W. Libertr, Wheeler and Carter. Frenchburg, Armitage and Armitage.

Second game, Frenchburg 15, West Liberty 9.

Batteries—W. Liberty, Davis, Williams and Cisco. Frenchburg, Armitage and Armitage.

Wheeler pitched a great game for West Liberty, striking out batters when the bases were full and a hit would have made two or three runs.

OBITUARY.

MARY B., daughter of W. W. and Elizabeth Cox, was born Sep. 14, 1852, in Morgan county, Ky., and died at West Liberty, Ky., June 30, 1911, aged 58 years 9 months and 11 days.

On May 2, 1877 she was united in marriage to M. T. Womack. To this union was born one son, Clay Wade. The husband, son, one brother, Henry M. Cox and one sister, Mrs. Jennie Manker, survive her.

Beside the members of her immediate family, she leaves many relatives and friends, the church and the whole community to mourn her loss.

When twelve years of age she made confession of her faith in Christ and was baptised by Eld. Curran Maxey, becoming a member of the Christian Church at West Liberty, Ky., of which she remained a faithful member until she joined the church triumphant.

She is one who will be greatly missed by all who knew her, for she was a devoted wife, mother and friend. She loved her home and family and gave herself largely to them, but yet her kindly spirit found other ways expression, for in her the sick and needy always found a sympathetic and helpful friend. And too, while she loved the quiet and always preferred the retreat of her own home to public activities or the fireside of any other, there was no incident or movement in the community in which she did not have an interest. She loved all that was best in life and was keenly alive to all that stood for the moral and intellectual uplift of the community. Back of the reserve and quiet life there was a virile, vital public spirit. In her blood coursed enough of the oak and granite of her Scotch-Irish and English ancestry to give her conviction, and by these convictions she lived and has died.

For several years she has suffered a decline of health but yet life itself was to her a joy, and for the sake of fellowship with and service to her family and friends she has fought death back. Three weeks ago last Friday, hoping for further relief, she went from her home to St. Anthony's hospital, Louisville. There under the examination of the country's best medical skill it was found her case was beyond the power of earthly help and there was naught to do but to make her as comfortable as possible until disease had done its work.

Though not so told by any one, it seemed by intuition that she understood that her sojourn here was soon to end and her heart turned homeward. From the moment she lost hope of recovery she pleaded to be brought to her home and friends. It was here among these hills and valleys and scenes and friends that she had been born and reared and had lived and wrought and here she would die and among these things which were warp and woof of her soul and life would she have her body rest in its last sleep. Because of her unceasing entreaties the journey homeward was undertaken and one week ago Friday she again reached home. In this fact she was happy. Then through the days of another week she tarried with us and last Friday she quit the tabernacle of earth for the abode of immortality.

In the life of such an one as this humanity is rich and the grave cannot contain her, for her influence like a sweet fragrance, remains to bless the race. And while we are gathered here with varied interests and relations there is no heart in this circle, nor in the wide circle of the world to whom the message of her passing has come that has not felt the thrill from the sense of loss, for it is said, "mother is dead" and there is no heart so dead that it does not vibrate to the echo of these words. So not alone do we weep to day, but in the company of humanity's full circle do we find ourselves, for in these words, "mother is dead" is echoed the common sorrow of men.

But yet why weep? Our weeping is for our own hearts and not for hers. As she closed her eyes in the sleep of death there was no fear to mar the passing, but in the repose of confidence she passed into the great beyond and we bid her REST.

A Growsome Weapon.

A certain English family owns a stiletto which inspires every one who holds it with a horrible and almost irresistible desire to kill some woman. This weapon belonged to an ancestor whose deed he had sworn revenge against the whole sex, and with the dagger killed his wife, his wife's sister and another woman before he was disarmed and secured.

Big Shark on His Line.

An immense shark measuring 7 feet ten inches and weighing over 500 pounds, was caught by Fred Parker, a Redondo Beach (Cal.) fisherman, while trolling for barracuda several miles out from shore. Parker noticed the shark following his launch, the line, for some time and threw out a line for it. The shark took the bait, and a battle lasting nearly two hours followed.

No Time for Hesitation.

In transferring the two thousand passengers from the sinking steamer Republic, the greatest difficulty was found in getting the women to leap at the very instant they were told to. If they hesitated an instant a wave carried the boat too far away, and they fell into the water, and had to be fished out. One woman who so fell had a bag of jewels in her hand, which she lost.

Considerable Lobster.

The largest lobster taken off the Maine coast for a number of years was caught recently by the Portland fishing steamer Catfish and weighed 17 pounds and was nearly three feet in length. The legs were nearly as large as the claws of an ordinary lobster, while the claws were huge affairs.

A Great Difference.

In a spread-eagle speech on the immortality of the soul, an orator exclaimed: "I looked at the mountains, and could not help thinking, 'Beautiful as you are, you will some day be destroyed, while my soul will not.' Then I gazed upon the ocean, and cried out, 'Mighty as you are, you will some day dry up, but I never will!'"

The Greatest Social Force.

The middle classes are the preponderant social force of today in republics as well as in monarchies in Europe or in America. Everything is everywhere subordinated to the necessity of satisfying them as speedily and as thoroughly as possible.—Ferrero in Paris Figaro.

The Shah's Dagger.

The late shah of Persia owned a dagger which is said to make its possessor invincible. But as the superstition is that he who uses it shall inevitably perish by it, it is kept securely locked in a sandalwood box.

Ended in a Draw.

Hank: "Si Hawbnick and his missus had a tarnation squabble this mornin' over who should go out ter the pump an' git the water." Hiram: "Dew tell! How did it end?" Hank: "In a draw. Si drawed the water."

To Clean Furniture.

To take marks off varnished furniture wet a sponge in common spirits of camphor, and apply it freely. It has nearly, if not quite, the same effect as varnish, and much cheaper.

And He Will.

There are men who ask for a fairly square chance to do good work, and there are others whose only aim is to make it a "steady thing"—and the boss can take his pick.

Like an Onion.

A man who is always priding himself on his fine ancestry is a good deal like an onion in the field, only not quite as strong—the best he lays claim to is under ground.

White Man's Burden.

As a general thing we are quite sorry for the man who has to work for a living and maintain a set of most little side-whiskers at the same time.

Forgetting the Middleman.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.
